

Julie Scott, Ph.D.

Lominger International Associate Julie Scott has been working with Lominger tools for several years beginning in the late 90s during a PhD class in organizational development at University of Washington.

Scott focuses her consulting work on bringing Lominger's Leadership Architect tool suite into corporate and not-for-profit settings of all sizes, and fine-tuning the applications to serve each organization's needs.

She has enjoyed providing many hours of facilitated feedback to learners going through a 360 process, and working as an executive coach.

Scott also uses her background in market research and MBA, combined with Lominger's Organization Architect, to help organizations connect their business strategy to their high potential and succession planning leadership development process.

Scott's clients include large international companies and domestic for-profit and not-for-profit organizations in financial services, manufacturing, healthcare, energy, mining, high technology and education.

Scott comes from the academic world where she was an award-winning professor frequently called upon to speak for small and large groups. She holds an MS in journalism from University of Oregon, an MBA from University of Rochester, and a PhD from University of Washington.

She has been helping individuals and organizations use and understand Lominger tools as part of the Woods Group in Gig Harbor, Washington since 2002.
